

CONFERÊNCIA INTERNACIONAL
AMAZÔNIA E NOVAS ECONOMIAS

INTERNATIONAL SPEAKERS CONFIRM PARTICIPATION IN THE CONFERENCE

Ivan Duque, President of Colombia (2018-2022), will be in Belém (PA) to participate in The Amazon and New Economies International Conference, between August 30th and September 1st, 2023. In addition to them, the 8th Secretary General of the UN, Ban Ki-Moon, will also be present to deliver the keynote address on the 30th. The Conference will promote a historic meeting and debates between renowned speakers and experts with forest peoples, ordinary citizens, businesses and academics. Throughout the Conference, the focus will be on finding solutions to keep the forest standing and collaborate with building a Green Agenda for the economic transition.

PRESIDENT OF IBRAM DEFENDS THE GREEN AGENDA

BY RAUL JUNGSMANN

Conserving biodiversity and combating deforestation in the region has become imperative for Brazil's progress and to mitigate the impacts of global warming. The Amazon is home to almost 30 million people who depend on the resources made available by the forest to live with dignity. Any environmental agenda that disregards the defense and respect for the Peoples of the Forest is doomed to failure. The new economies are at the center of the transition from a scenario of environmental degradation to another in which keeping the forest standing does not impact the quality of life of the population.

BRAZIL AND THE AMBITION TO DEAL WITH THE FUTURE

BY IZABELLA TEIXEIRA

Current times are marked by crises, risks and vulnerabilities. The world is experiencing uncertainties of various kinds and societies are in motion and in transition. In a context marked by the crises of democracy and nature (the so-called triple planetary environmental crisis), the future is looming. The confluence of the climate, innovation and social and environmental inequalities heralds the frontiers of the necessary and urgent transformation of humanity's relationship with nature.
